ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Softball has taught me how to accept failure and use it to make me stronger. I've learned that to be successful you must not only be physically strong, but mentally strong and determined. Over the years, I have been able to use softball as an outlet to help me turn everything else in my life off. Loving the game unconditionally has been hard but I am at the point where I do. I've gained lifelong skills such as teamwork, the ability to take criticism, and sportsmanship. Softball has taught me that things are not always fair, but it's how you deal with it and the attitude you have that separates you from the rest. My future plans for softball are undetermined at the moment. But I would like to continue my softball career if that's where my life takes me.
